

About Dr. Elizabeth "Libby" White

My journey of over three decades in education has been driven by a singular belief: every student deserves an equitable chance to succeed, and the greatest lever for that change is a well-prepared and empowered educator.

I am Dr. Elizabeth "Libby" White, and I approach educational challenges as both an educational strategist and a passionate equity advocate. My career, which includes managing school systems, developing teachers, and ensuring the success of multilingual learners, has shown me what truly works to create lasting, positive change in PreK-12 schools.

My Mission

As the owner of Bianchi Consulting, I partner with school districts and educators to move beyond temporary fixes and establish sustainable, equitable practices that increase instructional impact. I founded this firm because I am deeply committed to translating the proven strategies from my 30+ years in leadership into clear, actionable plans that yield powerful results for students and staff alike.

The Consulting Edge: A Parent's Perspective

As a parent of seven children, including those with learning and behavior disabilities, I know what it means to lead through complexity. This is not just a personal fact—it's the core of my consulting philosophy. Successfully navigating IEP meetings as a parent, managing varied developmental needs, and advocating for a large, diverse family has forged an unparalleled expertise in strategic planning, long-term advocacy, and conflict resolution. I excel at creating order out of chaos and developing customized, scalable systems that outperform one-size-fits-all approaches. Let my proven resilience and strategic mind work to stabilize, organize, and grow your business.

I'm here to help you transform your vision of equitable education into reality. Let's partner to make your greatest impact yet.
